A Dangerous Customer.

On July 10th, Constable English received a phone message from Winnifred saying an unknown man had pulled a revolver on Ed. Gosselin, John Hartner and Ted Winchcombe at Winnifred.

The man was suspected of presenting a forged cheque on the Union Bank at Winnifred on July 3rd, and when Gosselin with the assistance of the others attempted to arrest him he pulled out a revolver and threatened them. He then left the town, but was followed at a distance, and on the arrival of Constables English and Bruce from Bow Island the man was located in a wheat field about six miles east.

Four men in a car were placed on the government road, three men in a car across the north trail, and English, Bruce and Parker advanced across country.

At an order from English the man threw up his hands, but almost immediately lowered them to his hip pocket. Whatever his intentions they were frustrated by prompt action on the part of the constable.

Accused saw the game was up and capitulated.

He was taken to Lethbridge last week and remained for eight days.

BIRTHS.

On Sunday, July 16th, Mrs. Ed. Thompson of a son.

On Sunday, July 16th, Mrs. Robt. Burdett, of a son.

On Saturday, July 14th, Mrs. E. Brown of Burdett, of a son.

On Tuesday, July 17th, Mrs. Park, of Grassy Lake, of a daughter.

Mrs. Scott of Winnifred, who was operated upon Tuesday is doing nicely.

Mrs. Bishop of Burdett, who also underwent an operation recently, is progressing very favorably.

Mrs. Hogan of Calgary arrived this week to assist in the hospital.

THE CROPS.

Notwithstanding the continued dry weather, the crops are looking up well. This applies, however, more particularly to summer fallow. The grain sown late is not making very satisfactory progress, and much of it is almost past hope. Even with this however, a good rain would probably work a complete change, and some of the crops sown late might yet surprise us. It was our privilege to be taken through a large part of Bow Island's wheat belt on Sunday, and what we saw gave us renewed faith and hope in the district. There are thousands of acres of wheat that could not look better. Much of it one would say from a casual glance would go anywhere from twenty-five to thirty-five bushels. A closer inspection, however, shows that the wheat is not filling out as well as one would probably hope for. A little rain would help this along. Altogether, we should say that 90 per cent of the summer-fallow could not look better, and even in the event of no more rain, Bow Island is assured of a good crop.

GRASSY LAKE TO WHITLA

Charged with Cutting a Fence.

On June 26th, Jos. Ancien of Bow Island laid information before F. W. Brown, J.P., against L. D. Brower of Lethbridge for destroying his fence across the northwest quarter of 16-10-10, by cutting down the fence in several places and permitting the stock to stray.

L. D. Brower appeared before the justice on July 9th charged with the above offence, and pleaded not guilty.

Mr. W. F. Harris of Lethbridge appeared for the accused and Constable English for the prosecution.

Jos. Ancien gave evidence that he saw L. D. Brower on June 27th drive over to the fence in a motor car with W. F. Henderson, and on the 28th he went over to the fence and found it had been cut in several places.

W. F. Henderson gave evidence to the effect that he drove L. D. Brower out to 16-10-10 on June 27th in his motor car. Brower got out and cut the fence in about fifteen different places and then returned to Bow Island.

Accused was found guilty and fined $20.00 and costs of $0.00.

An appeal has since been lodged by L. D. Brower against this decision.

Spies Everywhere.

The Germans have made use of neutrals for spying purposes to such an extent that today every person arriving in the United States from abroad whether that person be a stranger abroad, a ship or a member of the ship's crew, is caused to disem-bark after he or she lands. The allies, including the United States, have suffered much more from the work of spies than have the Germans. The latter had their agents "planted" in the various countries long before the war. Some of these spies became citizens of the country in which they carried on their work. Undoubtedly there have been English and French spies in Germany before the war.
Every nation has sought to find out what the other nations were doing particularly in the military way, but none of them ever went to the lengths that the German government did.
Formerly when war broke out it was the military spy's duty to don the uniform of the country in which he was operating, and he usually worked until he was caught—and caught. Foreign spies in Germany didn't have very much chance when the great conflict was let loose in the late summer of 1914. To the surprise of the whole world, German troops appeared in uniforms which had never been heard of, which German officers themselves didn't even know of until war was declared. This was the "field grey" uniform. Naturally a spy under these conditions was doomed from the very beginning. It happened that a number of them were in Germany in August, 1914, and when the war was declared they put on the usual German uniform, prepared for the eventuality beforehand. As soon as they appeared on the streets they were simply picked up and taken away to be shot.

Burdett Has Seventh Inning Rally, Defeated Taber in One of the Best Games of the Week

Emard's Twirling Was Too Much for the Taber Boys and They Failed to Score After the Fourth Innings—Score Was Seven to Five.

(Melville Hat News.)

It was anybody's game until the last batter faced the pitcher and retired in the dugout, in the last night's conflict between the Taber and Burdett nines. It was a pitchers' battle, until the seventh innings, when Morrow weakened and the Burdett boys hammered three runs over the plate. He was removed from the mound and Smith was sent in, but too late to save the game. Emard twirled a heady, consistent game for the Burdett, working well with his battery mate, Jack Edington, whose work behind the plate was without a flaw. It looked like a score for Taber in the first inning, when Art Lee slugged out a three-base hit right off the reel, but he remained on third sack for the balance of the innings.

A temporary accession by the Taber infield gave Burdett their first, two infielders which came in early initial turn at bat. Emard's little single allowed him to reach first when the third baseman failed to field it properly, but he was forced out at second on Edington's drive. Berg and Demmon were safe on errors, and advanced a base on C. Walker's liner. Emard's single to the right field gave them two runs. T. Walker fanned.

There was nothing doing for Taber in the second inning, but Burdett managed to make another score on the mound. W. Walker sent a single to right field. Emard fanned Edington's two-bagger advanced Walker to third and Berg's sacrifice allowed him to cross the plate.

It was Taber's turn in the third when they evened up the tally. Pearson took one in the slate and stalled to first. A. Lee walked over to third, sacks, advancing him to third, and Pearson scored on a wild pitch. Hafele sacrificed. R. Lee walked and second. Green hit to short and was safe. Bode went out on a foul fly to Demmon. C. Walker's flimsy handle of Morrow's sacrifice hit allowed the latter to reach first, and B. Lee to reach home. Lewis was hit by a pitched ball, but Noble ended the suspense by striking out.

Taber crawled ahead in the fourth when Pearson flew out to field. Edington made a great grab of a foul off A. Lee's wrist. Hafele secured a single over second, and then swiped a base, scoring on R. Lee's two-base hit. Green brought Lee home with a single to right. Bode fanned. This score, as Emard tightened up and was invulnerable with men on base.

Burdett crept a little closer in the fifth, when they failed to get out of the way of a pitched ball, went to second on a passed ball and scored on a single to right field by first baseman.

In Taber's half of the seventh inning Art Lee had whiffed, Green slugged between second and third, but Flour Mill for Burdett.

M. A. Hardie, has Important Project Under Way.

The activity that has marked Burdett's progress during the present year is to be rendered more pronounced by the erection of a flour mill. Mr. M. A. Hardie is now making the necessary arrangements, and in about three weeks' time he expects to have everything in shape to make a start. He has succeeded in getting a site of eight acres just south of the track, opposite the depot and near the elevators. This week he is laying the foundation of a substantial house which will be erected close to the flour mill site. He has also let the contract for a water well, the success of which is almost assured in view of the success already attained in the vicinity.

It is Mr. Hardie's intention to erect a flour mill of twenty-five barrels, which will be increased to fifty as soon as results warrant it. The idea was first conceived by him some years ago and since that time the opinion he then formed as to its success of operation has been considerably strengthened. In this he was greatly encouraged by the promise of assistance and support from the farmers in the district, many of whom have for some time been agitating in the matter.

In addition to the flour mill, Mr. Hardie will also install an up-to-date feed mill and crusher, which no doubt will be much appreciated by the farmers.

Even when one considers the big crops harvested in the Burdett district the last few years, and the fine prospects for this year, it demands nevertheless considerable enterprise and forethought to engage in an enterprise of this nature in view of the present unsettled condition of affairs. Mr. Hardie's venture, therefore, should, and no doubt it will, leave the whole-hearted support and co-operation of the citizens of Burdett and vicinity.

This undertaking means much for the town and undoubtedly will aid greatly to its development.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Stewart arrived from Montreal last Friday.

The Court of Session was held here on Wednesday but few appeared. Apparently the citizens are fully satisfied with their assessment.

Messrs. Maxwell and Bishop are moving this week into their new post-office, which they are fitting up with fixtures of a thoroughly modern nature.

The Village Council, after making some considerable road improvements, has now turned its attention to the village pump, which it is making a permanent fixture in a bed of cement. The next thing, we presume, will be the watering cart.

New stores and new business men are having their inevitable consequences in the introduction of new ideas. Many things are projected for the good of the town, and not the least important of these is the proposed formation of a Board of Trade. It has been felt for some time that such an organization should be organized, where matters affecting the citizens' welfare could be discussed and steps taken to put Burdett on a thoroughly progressive basis. It is understood that a meeting will be called shortly dealing with the matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton of Illinois are visiting Gilbert Holmden.

A. H. Rygg has purchased the property adjoining his residence.

Mrs. C. Henderson and her sister left last Friday to visit relatives in Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Rygg are leaving on Saturday for the Kootenay country. They will probably be gone about a couple of weeks.

The Other Kind

There, but, it is a home like you've never, and I wish you both joy, said the old minister, as he gazed at the beaming faces of the young couple he had just united.

"You're getting to the end of all your troubles now," he added encouragingly to the bridegroom. "Time wait on, as time will, and a few months later the old minister met the young fellow who had started matrimony with such a smiling face.

"You look pretty miserable, my friend," said he. "Well, I might," came the reply. "I thought you told me in the church as 'ow I'd got to the end of all my troubles."

"Ah, so I did," said the minister, with a glimmer in his eye, "but I didn't say which end!"

Buck Couldn't See How That Happened

"Papa," Rosie asked, "was it a very wise person who said, 'he good die young?'"

"Yes," replied the father, "I suppose he must have been very, very wise."

"Well," said the child, after meditating for some time on the import of his answer, "I'm not really so much surprised about you, but—mamma—no, I don't see how mamma managed to get so old!"

Saving the Food Supply in Britain

London Teaches Cooks That War Rationing Is Possible Without Biscuits

The announcement by the food controller that from more than fifty important British towns, more than a satisfactory reduction of food consumption, and the government of food, Mr. Kennedy Jones, that compulsory rationing is unnecessary, indicates that the British people mean to avoid "Presidentialism" of the family leader. Fortunately, the ministry of food found ready to use the organization of the national war savings committee, whose efforts made such a popular success of the last war. The advantage of the committee's organization is that the actual work is done by local branches which the central body looks to guide rather than control. The ministry of food also has wisely confined itself to stating principles and outlining policies, leaving the details of application to those familiar with the special conditions of each locality.

An early result was that, in a practical, hard-headed Yorkshire manufacturing town, the local food controller's system of rationing was put a voluntary reduction of ration below what was required by the government's system. The result was that municipal management was expected to accomplish this more than the more surprising, therefore, to hear that a London locality, Muswell Hill, has been able to reduce its food record by reducing the consumption of bread per capita from one and a half pounds allowed by the controller's ration.

I learned today that this holds good for but one day a week, namely, Monday. The practice of rationing is continuing Sunday baking at the food controller's order, and the result is that of extra stale bread, which is at least twenty-four hours old, instead of the stipulated twenty-four hours of the week. This has resulted in Muswell Hill, in the last week, movement to make Monday a sort of needless day and has caused the saving of at least a pound per capita per week. Muswell Hill is but part of a district of London where this particular campaign has resulted in an average saving of one and one-fourth pounds of bread per capita per week. This has resulted in Muswell Hill, in the last week, movement to make Monday a sort of needless day and has caused the saving of at least a pound per capita per week. Muswell Hill is but part of a district of London where this particular campaign has resulted in an average saving of one and one-fourth pounds of bread per capita per week.

On my way to the food controller's office, I was told that the details of the work of the local committee. Though a model of efficiency, it is more a typical of the effort being put forth all over the country. The food controller is the necessity of informing the people what was required of them, and then leaving them to do it. Literature prepared and furnished by the ministry of food starts the ball rolling. Instead of dumping on the doorstep a bunch of leaflets and pamphlets, the committee employs one thing at a time. The district covered is filled with leaflets of the middle class, who are more than ordinarily amenable to suggestion. Hence when the committee began to hold demonstrations in the school buildings to show the authorities to relieve the strain on bread, sugar and meat, they found the people eager to learn the use of cornmeal and other things not in common here.

But the best use of the schools was made when the children were taken to them. Hours were set aside for talks on food by the teachers, and demonstrations of what could be done with the rationed allowed. For example, a four pound loaf was cut up before their eyes in such a way as to show how far it might go. The children were shown the various weights of food, such as sugar and meat, so that they might acquire concrete notions of rationing. Lunches, carefully rationed, were brought to school and, leagues of honor were formed, pledging persons to conform to the controller's regime. The influence of these school children in the home is a powerful factor in the scheme of the campaign.

Inducing cooks to take the rationing seriously was another important factor. This was recognized at the beginning as a problem, since an expert to whom a cook is likely to be regarded by the domestic as a rival to reduce her own wages, part of which consists of food. By working through the N. W. C. A. or organizations demonstrations were started which secured the co-operation of this group, so important in the prevention of waste.

Though in a minority, the poorer classes of the district were by no means neglected. Those housewives whose lot it is to juggle out the daily dinner on a single gas burner were shown how this might be done, not only in accordance with the plans for rationing, but with distinct improvement in the nutritive value of the dishes prepared.

The energies of every existing agency for social betterment have been enlisted to bring the people into line with the nation's need, and these agencies run the gamut from the churches to the "nightingales." In the case of the latter, it is interesting to note that this eminently respectable district, which lies just outside the metropolitan area where Sunday markets are permitted, and had hitherto been a bad one, is now actually arranging for its motion picture house to open on Sunday so that films and lectures on food economy may be introduced.

A boy's notion of a worthless dog is one that won't chase cats.

This From The Enemy

An Article by Captain von Salzman in the Berlin Volksbeobachter

Let nobody be deceived by the events of the day. Let people regard everything in a large frame, and then they will not lose perspective and they will feel no occasion for fear. Hindenburg's plan is unknown to us just as they are unknown to the enemy. He holds the decisive factor in his hands, and he will know how to use it when the time comes, in the old style of Moltke. As is known, waiting calls for strong nerves, these nerves, as we know, and in that fact we can place our blind confidence.

The English spirit of organization has been the main factor in promoting the extraordinary construction of the systems of roads behind the Anglo-French front, and in completing the system in a fashion which we are compelled to admire. From the reports received from abroad we know since the beginning of the war, this manner of warfare lacks all that is shocking in it. It is the mechanical solution of a mechanical question. The present Anglo-French attack does not show a new factor. It is always the same old picture of a mechanical smashing down of the opponent, and, finally, actually, it is the same old picture.

As long as the material superiority of the enemy lasts, the Hindenburg strategy of voluntary evacuation of narrow sections from death will be the only possibility of a passive reply. In view of all this can any living German still retain the smallest doubt about the justification of our live marine warfare? It is the mechanical transport of material from America to Europe, equipped with the latest machinery. Who in Germany dares to take upon himself the blind guess of the future of work in the munition factories to make our brothers at the front more sure of the failure of our soldiers at the front—much worse than one hundred days of drudgery.

No Tution Prince for Dutch

Accident to Queen Starts Move to Settle Question of Succession

One consequence of the rain accident in which Queen Wilhelmina had a narrow escape from death will be the passing of a bill settling the question of the succession to the throne of Holland. This is extremely complicated owing to the fact that the queen's daughter, Princess Juliana, who is now 8 years of age, the next in line would come to the throne at lines that have been drawn. The next in line is a prince of Prussia.

Princess Juliana is a German prince to rule them even temporarily, not that they want to be ruled, but that they want to be ruled by a German prince, which every one hopes is far off, but as was said by the queen's accident may come at any time. German newspapers, referring to the efforts of the Dutch to settle the matter for themselves, reproach Holland with being useless in discussing and deciding the succession while the queen is still alive and in good health.

Queen Wilhelmina's behavior in the queen was admirable. She slighted from the half overruled canal or and helped to hinder her, but she showed her still more to the Dutch people. Nevertheless, the newspapers are starting a campaign to reach an early settlement of a question vital to Holland's future.

Nitrogen Gas in Rain The composition of rainfall is of great interest to an agricultural standpoint, and has been the subject of many researches. The fact that the amount of nitrogen and nitrous acids in rain have certain relations to the prevailing weather conditions was shown not long ago in a paper read before the Chemical Society at Melbourne, Australia, and the growth of this paper was the inauguration of systematic observations at 16 stations well distributed over Australia, under the auspices of the British Association. Each observer is provided with a glass rain-collecting gauge and a set of specially prepared, stoppered bottles, in which samples of rain water are forwarded to the Melbourne for examination. The analysis of these samples will be correlated with meteorological data collected by the Commonwealth Meteorological Bureau.

"Has Crimson Gulch quit drinking?"

"Yes," replied Broncho Bob. "And playing fair bank."

"Quit, entirely?"

Lignite May Solve

The Fuel Problem Brierley Can Be Made at Two-thirds Cost of Coal

Professor Rutan, of the Canadian Advisory Council of Scientific Research claims that the problem of utilizing the vast deposits of lignite coal in Saskatchewan as a source of fuel for Western Canada had practically been solved. As the results of the efforts which had been made by the Research Council, a process had been found which would successfully convert those present lignite deposits into briquettes form for fuel purposes at a cost equal to two-thirds of that now paid for the prairie for anthracite coal. "Found for point," these briquettes will contain as much heat power as anthracite coal," Professor Rutan declared.

The professor also stated that the Dominion government had been advised by the Research Council to adopt the process and establish a plant as soon as possible in Saskatchewan to commence operations. The cost of such a plant would be some $400,000, and the output would amount to 100 tons per day. It was suggested by Professor Rutan that the size of the initial expenditure might cause the government to hesitate in undertaking it immediately.

The announcement regarding the utilization of the lignite beds in the West, however, was received so enthusiastically that T. R. Deacon, of Winnipeg, has written to the professor in Winnipeg he would guarantee to find the required $400,000, which to promote such a valuable enterprise. "We should ask the government," he said, "for a small loan to carry on this scientific work. What is a million dollars in dollars and cents when the results of it are so inestimable."

When the new shoots of alfalfa at the crown of the plant are from one to two inches high the crop is ready to be cut for hay, is the advice given by specialists of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station. The common rule that the crop must not be cut until a trench in bloom does not always hold, these experts claim, for the alfalfa will be ready to cut when the plant gets to large before this period of bloom that they are injured at harvest.

All roads that lead to Easy street need paving.

Kernsky

New Minister of War the Man of the Hour in Russia

It would not be wide of the mark to say that Alexander Kernsky, Minister of War, is the man of the hour in Russia. A study of his career, however, would disappoint those who look for a dictator. Kernsky is not the stuff of which dictators are made. He has always been for the under dog. His clients at the bar were the poor and persecuted. He fought for the Jews, which is not a popular thing to do in Russia. When thirty-five Alexander Kernsky represented the workmen of the River Neva strike, in which some sixty workmen were shot down by the police. Later he assisted the defense of Mendel Bittas, charged at Kiev with ritual murder, and was one of a group of lawyers sent to imprisonment for protesting in a "round robin" against the methods of the prosecution. But the Imperial government dared not deprive those courageous protesters of their liberty.

The following year Kernsky was elected to the Duma to represent Socialist Labor. He distinguished himself by exposing corruption in the government and in the Russian army and navy. He was arrested for his war against pro-German influences and denounced "gratifying officials in and out of the military service."

Kernsky is the man who, rising in his place, resisted the dissolution of the Duma by the Czar when the forces of revolution were gathering. "We will not go, we stay here," said he, and out of the military service. He was appointed Minister of Justice in the provisional government, but lost his position in releasing political prisoners from Siberia. "New York Sun."

"What is war?" "It is the definition," replied the diplomat. "But if you want to be polite and scholarly you might say that war is a series of overt acts definitely resisted."

And the Band Played On

An Amusing Incident That Happened Before the War

Mr. Lloyd George joined heartily in the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" at the luncheon of the American Luncheon Club. It was not difficult for him to do, for the tune is that of our own National Anthem. It is also that of the Prussian national anthem, and this fact was responsible for a laughable controversy at Potsdam some years before the war broke out. Sir Edward Lascelles, then British ambassador to Germany, was invited to lunch with the Kaiser at the palace on King Edward's birthday in 1904, and His Majesty gave orders that when his guest left the band was to play "God Save the King" so long as His Excellency's carriage remained in sight. But the ambassador, thinking the band was greeting the Kaiser with "Heil dir in Siegerbrun," stood up in his carriage and told the coachman not to start until the band stopped. The bandmen, faithful to their orders continued to play, and the Kaiser's carriage was played several times over before the Kaiser, grasping the situation, stopped the music. Whereupon Sir Frank Lascelles said, and the carriage proceeded to the station—London Daily News.

The German Time-Table On February 1 it was announced that Britain would be brought to her knees in three months if the Germans have always had some timetable of that kind, and invariably something has gone wrong with the time-table.

The enemy could bring America into the war. He cannot starve us out of it. He can supply coal to us to cultivate and economize and revive and re-organize to still better and better purpose than he thought possible. He can raise America, like British, against invasion to the very utmost. He can prolong the war, quite contrary to the desire to attempt to shorten it. He can inspire the Allies in Europe with a shrewder and more patient tenacity. But he cannot deprive our machines of essential material any more than our people of food or deprive the Allies and America from accumulating the military force which will settle the war—From the London Observer.

Sniper Killed Old Tex. Jones

American Adventurer Took One Chance Too Many at Vinny Ridge

Old Tex Jones, pros-hailed, light-framed, hailing originally from Oak Cliff, Dallas, Texas, has been killed at last. Shot through the heart by a German sniper, Tex fell forward, at a tunnel entrance near Vinny Ridge. That bulletin dropped the curtain on the most picturesque career of the entire American Legion—made up mainly of American professional soldiers. A major of the legion brought back an account of Tex's finish to London.

"He took too many chances," the American said, "the never seemed to learn that war was nothing like the wars he'd served in before in twelve years in the American army and elsewhere. One day a sergeant sent Tex up to dump a load of shells in No Man's Land. We'd been flinging the bucket over and yanking it back with a rope. But Tex didn't. One second after he stood up openly to show the pull over, a German sniper's rifle cracked and it was all over."

The day last fall old Tex sat on the edge of the platform at a station in England and told all about himself. A younger Tommy, Fred Miller, of Duluth, was with him. Tex had been in the American army in Texas, had done a little rationing along the border with cow outfits in Texas, but didn't return to the States. This, he didn't say. He took a train up in Canada, and when the war broke out Tex joined in.

He reckoned he'd like to go back to No Man's Land after the war, and maybe settle down. But Tex didn't figure on the sniper's bullet—New York Evening Sun.

The German Government is entirely responsible for the war. It must carry its responsibility like a cross, and expiation will be long. At the present time, even those who are demanding peace at any price repeat that Germany was attacked, that she was waging a war of defence, and that she was invaded by the invincible forces, premeditated the war. Germany, led by unworthy chiefs, premeditated the war. Germany, led by unworthy chiefs, premeditated the war. Germany, led by unworthy chiefs, premeditated the war. Germany, led by unworthy chiefs, premeditated the war.
